"In facilitating major gifts on behalf of donors to the University, I see the tremendous good that results."

Listed in The Best Lawyers in America and Worth magazine's Top 100 Attorneys, H. Allan Shore, J.D. '71, LL.M. '72, is a shareholder who specializes in high net worth estate and personal tax planning at the prestigious law firm Akerman Senterfitt. As a member of the Office of Estate and Gift Planning Advisory Board and of the Board of Governors of the Sylvester Comprehensive Cancer Center at the University, Shore has developed and published a series of algorithms that chart the efficiency of various charitable trusts. He recently helped coordinate landmark gifts from the family of the late Leonard M. Miller and from Phillip and Patricia Frost, for whom the University's medical and music schools are respectively named.

Shore's background as an attorney and CPA, coupled with his own history of philanthropy, enable him to advise the University on the methods of giving that are most advantageous to donor and recipient. His personal gifts—via cash and a charitable remainder trust—have supported scholarships and programs at the School of Law, the Miller School of Medicine, UM/Sylvester, The Sue and Leonard Miller Center for Contemporary Judaic Studies, and many other areas.

"The University is multidimensional. From the law school I attended and the football team I watch, to the medical school and its affiliations that serve the community, so much of my life is intertwined," Shore says.

GIVE WITH CONFIDENCE

Create a charitable remainder trust with the University of Miami and know that your contribution will achieve its maximum potential for both you and the institution. Your gift can support University programs, scholarships, and other pressing needs while providing you with a current tax deduction and an attractive payout, portions of which may be tax-free.
